InterContinental Hotels Group PLC

Paul Edgecliffe-Johnson to step down as Chief Financial Officer and Group Head of Strategy

InterContinental Hotels Group PLC (IHG or the Company) [LON:IHG, NYSE: IHG (ADRs)] announces that Paul Edgecliffe-Johnson will step down from the Board and his role as Chief Financial Officer and Group Head of Strategy to take up a new position outside of IHG.

Paul will leave IHG in six months' time and the Company has begun the process of appointing a successor.

Paul joined IHG in 2004 and held a number of senior roles before being appointed CFO and to the Board and Executive Committee in 2014. He additionally took on the leadership of IHG's strategy function in 2019.

Deanna Oppenheimer, Chair of IHG, commented:

"Paul has established excellent relationships across all our key stakeholders during his nearly 20 years at IHG. I want to thank him for his contribution to the Board and Executive Committee."

Keith Barr, Chief Executive Officer of IHG, commented:

"Paul has played a major role in helping IHG achieve its growth ambitions through expanding our brand portfolio, investing in our enterprise platform and building a strong finance team. Although we are sad to see Paul go, we wish him all the very best for the future."

Paul Edgecliffe-Johnson, Chief Financial Officer and Group Head of Strategy, commented:

"It has been a huge privilege to have spent almost two decades as part of such a dynamic and successful business. I have valued working with talented colleagues and I will be leaving in the knowledge that IHG is well positioned for further success."
